2. Introduction

The purpose of this Policy is to provide guidance in identifying and handling Conflicts of Interest involving Allan Gray and its Employees, which may arise in the rendering of financial services to clients.

The Applicable Legislation requires that Allan Gray takes steps to avoid and/or mitigate any such Conflicts of Interest. Furthermore, Allan Gray’s integrity and reputation depends on Allan Gray and its Employees doing the right thing, even when this is not the easy thing. This Policy intends to assist Employees in making decisions about their conduct in relation to Allan Gray’s business and is based on the principle that no one at Allan Gray should ever sacrifice integrity, or give the impression that they have, even if they think it would help business. This Policy applies to all Allan Gray Employees.

This Policy is applicable to the following Allan Gray entities:

3. Identifying a Conflict of Interest (including a potential or perceived Conflict of Interest)

Allan Gray faces a Conflict of Interest when it has an actual or potential interest which, when dealing on behalf of clients or for clients with Third Parties or other Allan Gray member companies, prevents Allan Gray from providing a fair and unbiased service. There are various scenarios where a Conflict of Interest may arise.

3.1 Receipt of Gifts and Entertainment by Employees

Employees should endeavor to avoid situations that might cause, or perceive to cause, a loss of independence or objectivity. Modest Gifts and/or entertainment from Third Parties, within the prescribed limits set out in this Policy, may be accepted by Employees on infrequent occasions only if it is clear that the Third Party is not trying to influence or reward the Employee inappropriately in connection with any business decision or transaction and the Gift is unsolicited.

Monetary limits are applicable to the above categories of Gifts and entertainment. Gift or entertainment funding that is received by an Employee from any Third Party may not exceed:

- R 1 000 in South Africa;
- N$ 1000 in Namibia;
- P 1000 in Botswana; or
- the equivalent of R1 000 for any other jurisdiction.

The above limits apply per annum and in aggregate from any one Third Party. Where the amount is unknown, Employees must estimate the cost based on the fair market value of the Gift and/or entertainment.

If an Employee receives Gift(s) or entertainment from a Third Party that exceed the monetary limit in a particular year, the Conflict of Interest must be avoided or mitigated as set out in section 4.

The acceptance of all Gifts by an Employee is subject to the approval of his/her direct line manager (in consultation with the head of the business unit concerned) and, where applicable, the Compliance Officer. Employees must declare Gifts and entertainment in line with the applicable internal procedures.

For Gifts and entertainment that are received by Employees from parties that do not fall within the definition of "Third Party", please refer to the Anti-Bribery and Corruption Policy. For Gifts and entertainment that are received by the principal officer and trustees of the Allan Gray Retirement Funds, please refer to the Allan Gray Retirement Funds' Policy on Gifts.

3.2 Ownership Interests in Third Parties and relationships with Third Parties

Employees who represent Allan Gray face Conflicts of Interest if they have a beneficial interest that may affect their ability to act in Allan Gray's clients' best interests. If an Employee was dealing on behalf of a client with a Third Party, such a beneficial interest would include an Ownership Interest in the Third Party or a special relationship (e.g. spouse, child, parent, sibling etc.) with somebody who has an Ownership Interest in the Third Party.

The organogram in Annexure A indicates relationships that Allan Gray has with associates that could give rise to a Conflict of Interest. Such Conflicts of Interest must be avoided or mitigated as set out in Section 4.

3.3 Employees investing for their own account

Conflicts of Interest may arise when Employees invest for their own account. These are dealt with separately in Allan Gray's Personal Investment Policy.

3.4 Gifts and entertainment for Third Parties

Allan Gray is committed to helping Third Parties and others with whom Allan Gray does business to avoid Conflicts of Interest by never placing them in a position of conflict in their dealings with Allan Gray.

With regard to Intermediaries, Employees may not do anything that may, or may be perceived to, influence the ability of Intermediaries to provide independent, unbiased and informed advice to their clients, irrespective of whether such clients are also clients of Allan Gray.

In light of the above, the following Gifts and entertainment that are provided to Third Parties may be considered acceptable:

- Gifts that are given on an occasion when Gifts are customary (on a birthday or major holiday, or on the occasion of a promotion or retirement, for example). Note that Gifts given in appreciation, support or as thanks for business are not permitted;
- advertising or promotional material such as pens, pencils, note pads, key chains, calendars, and similar items at permitted events, for example: road shows and similar functions; and
- reasonable meals, refreshments, and entertainment in the course of a business meeting or other business occasion.

Monetary limits are applicable to the above categories of Gifts and entertainment. Gift or entertainment funding that is given to Third Parties may not exceed:

- R 1 000 in South Africa;
- N$ 1000 in Namibia;
- P 1000 in Botswana; or
- The equivalent of R1 000 for any other jurisdiction.

The above limits apply per annum and in aggregate to any one Third Party.

In order to promote informed advice to their clients, Allan Gray offers Intermediaries and their clients training that covers Allan Gray's products and related legal matters, general financial and industry information, and the use of relevant financial services technology. All travel and accommodation expenses related to the training of independent financial advisers are for the attendees' account. Each training event must be approved in advance by the head of the relevant business unit. Training may not be made available exclusively to a select group of Intermediaries or clients.

All contemplated spending at Intermediary events must be carefully considered well in advance and not in any way be, or seen to be, excessive in that a perception could be formed that Allan Gray was or is attempting to influence the ability of an Intermediary to provide independent, unbiased, fair and informed advice to clients or potential clients. Allan Gray maintains a register of all spending on Intermediaries, regardless of the value.

Employees must declare Gifts and entertainment given to Third Parties in line with the applicable internal procedures.

Particular care must be taken with regard to South African retirement fund clients. Pension funds are prohibited from accepting invitations to entertainment events as well as accepting expenses related to conducting due diligence activities that are paid for by service providers (e.g. asset managers). Whilst Allan Gray may provide training to direct retirement fund clients, all costs such as accommodation and travelling, will be borne by these retirement funds.

For Gifts and entertainment that are provided to parties that do not fall within the definition of "Third Party", please refer to the Anti-Bribery and Corruption Policy.

3.5 Non-Bank Financial Regulatory Authority (Market Intermediaries Conduct of Business) Rules

For Allan Gray entities that are subject to the Non-Bank Financial Regulatory Authority (Market Intermediaries Conduct of Business) Rules, 2012 (Botswana), each client relationship must be reviewed at least annually to ensure that the client's interests are not being compromised. The results of the review must be documented.

4. Avoiding and mitigating Conflicts of Interest

If an Employee comes across a business practice or situation that he or she believes to be a Conflict of Interest involving Allan Gray, the Conflict of Interest must be avoided. In the case of Gifts and/or entertainment received from Third Parties that exceed the monetary limits, the Conflict of Interest can be avoided by refusing the Gift or entertainment or donating the excess amount to a charitable organisation. The Compliance Officer must be consulted in these cases.

If all attempts at avoiding the Conflict of Interest have been exhausted and the Conflict of Interest is considered unavoidable, the Employee must immediately report this to his or her manager and the Compliance Officer and seek guidance on what further action to take so that the Conflict of Interest can be mitigated as far as possible.

Potential or perceived Conflicts of Interest can be as damaging to Allan Gray's reputation as actual Conflicts of Interest and should be treated in the same way. When faced with a situation involving a potential Conflict of Interest, Employees must ask themselves whether or not full public disclosure of the matter would lead an outside observer to believe or conclude that a Conflict of Interest exists. Common sense and good judgment must at all times be used to determine whether or not Conflicts of Interest exist. In doubt, Employees must always put clients' interests first and avoid Conflicts of Interest that would compromise their or other Employee's ability to think and behave in clients' best interests.

Conflicts of Interest that have not been avoided must be disclosed to the affected client(s) and to the relevant regulator where applicable. Consent to act in the circumstances must be obtained.

5. Tip-Offs, non-compliance, training, and awareness

Employees must immediately report any potential or actual violations of this Policy to the head of Compliance. If the matter concerns a breach or potential breach on the part of the head of Compliance, it must be reported to the Chief Operating Officer. Alternatively, Employees may make use of the Tip-Off Procedure.

Allan Gray is committed to investigating all such reports and notifying the appropriate authorities where required.

It is a condition of employment with Allan Gray that Employees comply with this Policy. Non-compliance will result in the appropriate disciplinary measures in terms of Allan Gray's disciplinary code and procedures.

All Employees must know and understand this Policy and are required to undergo training on this Policy. The Learning Centre will train Employees on this Policy and keep a roster of all training.
